Occupation: Small Business Owner/Community Advocate

When my husband and I moved to Tracy nearly two decades ago, we were attracted to its small-town feel, reputation for being a safe, close-knit community, good schools, and affordable housing. Things have changed. Some of the changes are reasons to pause and seriously think about the future of our town. Our population is growing, but our infrastructure isn't keeping up. The commute is getting longer, and quality time with family is getting shorter. The cost of housing is rising, while wages in the area remain relatively low. Homelessness is growing, and the community has called for practical solutions that help those in need while protecting all residents' safety and quality of life. If that weren't enough, our city faces a 10-million dollar structural deficit, as businesses small and large struggle with the impacts of COVID-19, leaving many families out of work and unsure of their own housing and financial futures.

As a parent and small-business owner, public safety, economic development, and quality of life are my primary concerns. It is time for our community to unite around issues and find solutions that work for all Tracy residents. Vote Davis For A United Tracy! davis4tracy.com
